The Loudest Introvert - Bellingham, WA

Present

The Loudest Introvert is my brand and company name. For almost seven years, I have been self-publishing my own comic book series which I write, draw, and edit. Currently, the series is in its' ninth issue.

Recently, I wrote, directed, and costar my first short film. The entire process was a great experience, from learning to write a script, storyboard the script for the director of photography to follow, and creating the music using Garageband, which took eight days. Along with learning different editing programs, like After Effects, I utilized the Procreate to create a film poster. The film premiered in May in a standing-room-only theater at The Pickford Film Center, Bellingham, WA.

Although I've learned so much from the local filmmakers' community, where I was fortunate to work with a diverse cast and crew, there's an incredible amount I still need to learn. The best way I learn is with experience.

Along with the film, I travel to different pop culture conventions in the Pacific Northwest where I was an attendee and a vendor. The table was set up with my comic books, illustrations, and QR Codes to direct the audience to the film on YouTube. For the last five years, I would sell my work at Crypticon Seattle, the best horror convention in the PNW.
